

Dan Froelich

Modular Learning Specialist

Mr. Froelich began his career in education as a fifth grade teacher in New Bern, North Carolina. During his teaching experience, he transitioned to a school technology facilitator, providing hands-on experience with technology as a learning tool – eventually working with classroom teachers across Craven County.

For the past three and a half years, Mr. Froelich has been creating professional development content for K-12 teachers across the state as a Fellow for the North Carolina Teacher Academy. While delivering face to face professional development programs, he stepped into online learning. It quickly became his mission to work with teachers in improving teaching practices in online and blended learning environments.

In addition to supporting quality curriculum and instruction, Mr. Froelich loves finding new technologies and seeking out ways to improve teaching practices.

Mr. Froelich joined NCVPS in July of 2011 to assume the role of Modular Learning Specialist as part of the Curriculum and Instruction department. He will continue working with teachers, their practices, and course quality.

Mr. Froelich holds a Master's Degree in Instructional Technology from East Carolina University and as a Teaching Fellows Scholar with a Bachelor's Degree from the University of North Carolina at Pembroke.
