NCVPS Executive Director Selected to Participate in National Distance Learning Council

Raleigh, NC – Dr. Bryan Setser, Executive Director for the North Carolina Virtual Public School was selected by former Governors Jeb Bush (FL) and Bob Wise (WV) to participate in a national distance learning council being formed by the Foundation for Excellence in Education. The council brings together the brightest minds on digital learning from business, technology, education, philanthropy and government to recommend ten digital learning policy principles that will foster the digital revolution in education. These recommendations will be the focus of a nationwide campaign to urge adoption of the policy principles by states, track states' progress and encourage best practices.

Dr. Setser comments, "I share the position that a digital conversion for our schools must be intentional if we are going to Race to the Top in the coming decade. I have the utmost respect for Governor Bush and Governor Wise, and I look forward to serving on this national council to advance the cause of e-learning in the United States."
